Gasp (Visions) By Lisa McMann

The visions aren't stopping, and neither is the danger in this series conclusion from the New York Times bestselling author of the Wake trilogy.

After narrowly surviving two harrowing tragedies, Jules now fully understands the importance of the visions that she and those around her are experiencing. She's convinced that if the vision curse passed from her to Sawyer after she saved him, then it must now have passed from Sawyer to one of the people he saved.

That means it's up to Jules to figure out which of the school shooting survivors is now suffering from visions of another crisis. And once she realizes who it is, she has to convince that survivor that this isn't all crazy—that the images are of something real. Something imminent.

As the danger escalates in this conclusion to the Visions series, Jules wonders if she'll finally find out why and how this is happening—before it's too late to prevent disaster.

Editorial Review

From School Library Journal

Gr 9 Up—After two tragic experiences, Jules has begun to understand the nature of her visions and struggles to help those around her with this same special power before it's too late. As in the first two books, there are moments of gravity balanced with humor. Fans of the previous installments will get swept away as Jules and her friends deal with numerous disasters, though this final book could work as a stand alone.

Gasp

One

It's been a week since the shooting, and we're back on the University of Chicago campus. Ben Galang's eyes light up when he sees us, and he opens his dorm room door wider to let us in. Sawyer and I step inside and stand awkwardly in the crowded space while Trey eases in after us, taking care not to bump his injured arm on the skateboard that hangs from the ceiling next to the doorway.

Ben and Trey exchange greetings, and Trey's face floods with color.

"I didn't know you were coming with them," Ben says to Trey. He sounds genuinely happy to see him.

"Jules talked me into it," Trey says.

Right. Like I had to. I try not to laugh. "Yeah, I made him. He needed to get out of the apartment and get some fresh air. Thanks for getting up early on a Sunday."

"Thanks for saving my life, guys," Ben says.

"Okay," Sawyer butts in, "dude, you gotta stop with that."

"Sawyer is a rather uncomfortable hero," Trey explains.

"Sorry, man—I won't mention it again." Ben grins and points to our seating options.

Trey steps around a pile of laundry to a love seat and carefully picks up a bra from the seat cushion. He glances at Ben, eyebrow raised.

"Roommate's girlfriend spent the night. It's awesome," he says, sounding like it's totally not awesome. He snatches the bra from Trey's hand and tosses it on the bottom bunk bed. "They're slob. You guys met my roommate—Vernon. He was with me at the hospital. Have a seat. How's the arm?" He perches on the armrest opposite Trey as Sawyer and I sit in the two desk chairs.

Trey shrugs with his good shoulder. "Eh," he says. "It's all right."

Ben presses his lips together but says nothing more.

"So," I say, glancing around the room. Bunk beds, two desks, the love seat, a small TV balancing precariously on milk crates. One desk is fairly neat, and there's a map of the Philippines on the wall above it. "Um," I start again, turning my gaze back to Ben, "you're probably wondering why I wanted to talk to you."

He's wearing different funky glasses, I notice, and I remember that his got broken in the shooting. He smiles. "Kind of. What's up?"

I stare at the carpet, knowing that even though I practiced what I was going to say, this is going to sound so ridiculous. I lift my head and catch Sawyer's eye. He nods, giving me encouragement. My boys are on my side. I'm not alone. But it's still insanity, and I have to be careful. I turn my head toward Ben, who waits, puzzled.

And then I just blurt it out. "Any chance you've started seeing visions recently?"
