I Desire to be Everywhere: Louis Florent Gillet: Frontier Missionary, Founder, and Contemplative Monk By Gilbert Ahr Enderle

Born in Antwerp in 1813, Louis Gillet entered the Redemptorists and after ordination came to North America as a missionary. By 1843, he was a pastor in Monroe, Michigan, with multiple outmissions.

Seeking women religious to educate girls and finding none, he resolved to create some. His desire matched that of Mother Theresa Maxis Duchemin, an Oblate Sister of Providence. They established the Sisters, Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary in 1845. With this new institution barely underway, Gillet was falsely accused of misconduct, and recalled to Baltimore.

Rampant misunderstandings followed. Still ministering in North America, he lost contact with the sisters. Expelled from the Redemptorists in 1850, Gillet maintained that the decree never reached him, and in 1855 returned to Europe hoping to confirm his membership.

Failing this, he entered a new branch of Cistercian monks in France, thereafter known as Père Marie-Célestin. For a time he served as Prior-Abbot of Notre-Dame de Hautecombe in Savoy.

In 1891, Gillet learned that the women religious he co-founded had flourished. He maintained a happy correspondence with them until his death in 1892. In 1929 the IHM Sisters were able to return his remains to Monroe.
